COMPULSION FOR FRESHMAN YEAR

Subject of Debate at Delta
Sigma Society's Next Meeting.

On Wednesday at three o'clock in the Common Room the debate between the first and second years will take place. The subject is "Resolved: that the first year course should be compulsory." The first year, to whom the subject should be of the most vital interest, are supporting the negative; while the affirmative is being upheld by the Sophomore year, who evidently would not relieve others of the pains they have endured. This debate is the second in the series held by the Delta Sigma Society and will decide which year will try its strength with the juniors in the final contest. The winning year gains a point for the banner, so the debates should be carefully followed. The attendance at the last debate was very small. Let the Common Room be filled for this one—Wednesday, Dec. 14th, at three o'clock.

The Y. W. C. A. Cafeteria has been recently re-opened with a big reduction in the price list, and, judging from the numbers taking advantage of the opportunity of getting good meals, well cooked in a spotlessly clean kitchen, and served under pleasant surroundings for a very low sum, it bids fair to become one of Montreal's most popular eating places. Particularly does it commend itself to the student putting himself through college.

The fact that it is in the Y. W. C. A. does not mean that it is for women only. More men are coming all the time. The elevator at the end of the hall lets one off right at the entrance to the Cafeteria, and one can enter the building from either Stanley or Dorchester streets. The "Y" has always been an attractive place to young men. Why not try the Cafeteria.

At five o'clock this afternoon, in the Lounge Room of the Union, there will be held an important meeting of the "Lit." As matters of more than ordinary interest will be considered, it is hoped that a good representation of the McGill student body will see fit to be present. It is rumored that one of the items to be discussed will be the Mock Parliament, past and future, also any other questions those attending may wish to bring before the gathering.

MR. MacNAB C.P.R. SPOKE TO SOCIETY

Organisation of Railroads Discussed at Commerce
Meeting.

MAY HOLD DANCE.

Music and Refreshments
Livened the Proceedings.

A very enjoyable and instructive meeting of the Commercial Society was held last evening at the Union Cafeteria. There was a large attendance of members to hear Mr. MacNab, Electrical Engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, speak on the Organization of a Railroad. He was given a very attentive hearing by those present and in a very clear and concise manner explained the mystery of how a large railway was run.

The President of the Society, MacKinnon, opened the meeting with a few introductory remarks. He announced that if it was the unanimous wish of the members, the Commercial Society would hold a dance this winter. Most of those present signified by a showing of hands that they would support this. This matter was left in the hands of the executive. Mr. MacNab was then called upon to speak. His talk was illustrated by a plan which was set up on a stand. The main points of his discussion, which was based on the Canadian Pacific Railroad, were as follows:

Organization is the keynote of any railroad. The past year showed the necessity for organization. Every officer and employee of a railroad must have definite and precise duties to perform. He must also be responsible to one man only, responsibility to more than one party is not efficient. A good definition of a railroad is that a railroad is a company formed for the sale and manufacture of transportation.

He referred throughout his lecture to two blueprint plans which illustrated clearly his lecture. The sources of management of a railroad are as follows. The shareholders elect a board of directors. The directors elect a president. Under the president are a secretary and three vice-presidents.

The secretary is in charge of shares, transfers etc and general secretarial work. The three vice-presidents have control of traffic, operation and finance respectively.

Each of these departments is divided into Eastern and Western divisions. In the Canadian Pacific system there is really two separate railroads, the western lines and the eastern lines.

The speaker laid stress on the necessity of team work in a railroad. The

C.O.T.C. MADE TRIP OUT TO SHAWBRIDGE

Tactical Schemes Were Worked Out.

GREAT SUCCESS.

First Week-end Excursion of the Year.

Last Saturday morning at 8 a.m. the McGill Contingent of the C. O. T. C. assembled at the Place Viger station to take the trip to Shawbridge under command of Lt. Col. Thompson, M.C. There was a smaller turnout than had been hoped for, owing to the Contingent Orders being accidentally omitted from the Daily, but a total of 24 of all ranks took advantage of the excursion. Captain Leach joined the party later in the day; coming out in time for some of the afternoon exercises.

Upon arrival at the Boys' Farm and Training School the Contingent detrained, and took up their quarters in the main building. Rifles, blankets, etc., were brought out by special transport and issued without delay. Then an early dinner was provided by the ever-efficient Mr. Hardy so that a quick start could be made.

While the boys on the farm were having their dinner Captain Howard gave a short talk to the C. O. T. C. on extended order work. It was decided to divide the boys into sections, each to be under the command of an O. T. C. man. The tactical scheme was a simple one. Two Lewis' guns were to be hidden within set boundaries and the C. O. T. C. and the boys were to locate and capture their positions. Lt. Col. Thompson and Mr. Maudage, Asst.-superintendent of the farm, armed with rifles and "blank" represented the two Lewis' guns.

The attacking force commanded by Captain Howard, after coming under artillery fire extended into "blobs." Scouts soon reported the approximate positions of the two Lewis' guns, which were captured by turning their flanks.

As there was still some time till supper an attack was staged against the Farm buildings, which the enemy were reported to be holding in force. Luckily, however, no enemy was found, much to the disappointment of the boys, who were by then thirsting for a hand-to-hand encounter.

Supper over, most of the Contingent went in to see the sights of Shawbridge village where entertainment of various kinds was found by officers and men. All ranks returned to quarters weary, but well satisfied with the day's work. (Continued on Page 4.)

SEMI-FINAL BOUTS WEDNESDAY NIGHT

R.V.C. Students Are Specially Invited—Men Must Make Weight.

Arts vs Science and Commerce vs Medicine is the draw for the semi-finals to-morrow night, and enthusiasm is at a high pitch in all the faculties. Preparations are being made for a large crowd in the Union and speculation is rife in all departments of the university as to who will carry off the championship. Each faculty seems to be confident of carrying off the honours, and the way it looks now, no part of the University is going to have a runaway.

The boxers are all warned of the necessity of making their weight. The men are allowed three pounds to cover the weight of the gym outfit and shoes. No extra half pounds will be allowed at all. If the entrant is overweight he will have to forfeit his bout to the opposing man.

Unfortunately for the heavyweight division, however, Connor, the Commerce heavyweight has taken sick, and will not be able to appear on Wednesday or Thursday nights. However, there will be plenty of good bouts which no student should miss seeing.

An orchestra will be on hand on Thursday night, and there will also be some music on Wednesday night. The musicians will jazz away the time in between fights, and will probably be able to play the dead march in case any ferocious fighter hits a little too hard.

A special request is made to the students of the R.V.C. to be on deck. Their presence will be much appreciated by all.

The entries have not been received from Macdonald College as yet but are expected soon.

The men are to weigh in at Molson Hall on Wednesday any time between 12 and 2 o'clock.

"COME OVER INTO MACEDONIA."

Many hundreds of years ago, about nineteen hundred, to be somewhat exact, a man named Paul had a vision. He saw a man garbed in the dress of the Macedonian people appear before him and cry out, "Come over into Macedonia, and help us." And without questioning he went. He felt he absolutely had to go.

That was a call to service.

And now to-day do we not have the same vision. Do we not see anyone appear before us crying aloud for help? The world is in a turmoil, in a stage of dreadful transition, a transition leading no one knows whither, and she must be aided to the fullest extent of our capabilities.

The children of to-day are the men and women of to-morrow. The college men and women to-day are the rulers of to-morrow. We, in going forth into the struggle of life are a little better prepared to bear our part, or should be, and being so, we are looked to to show more than the average, that is, we are regarded as being out of the common run of individuals. We are expected to furnish the leaders which will guide this old earth successfully through the greatest crisis in her history.

It is a truly glorious opportunity which is thus thrown open to us, the opportunity of giving to others something which they have not, of leading the world onward into paths which she has not tread, of disclosing treasures yet more wonderful than those which have gone before. And the opportunity is for any one who will seize it, for anyone who will prepare himself for it.

Shall you, shall we, dare to spurn this golden chance? Shall we scorn to make use of the advantages and privileges which come to us through our university training? Shall we thoughtlessly go our own way and leave preparation for our life's work as something to be considered secondly, as not of paramount importance? Can we conscientiously refrain from taking upon our shoulders the brunt of the battle? Can any one of us turn a deaf ear to the masses crying out in their agony of bewilderment and suffering, "For God's sake help us, else we be led astray." Can we refuse to be true to ourselves and the best ideals of the race? The days have it. Let us to work.

SPECIALIZATION.

There is hardly a college student who does not, at some time or other recall the graduating address delivered to his high school class. The scene appears in retrospect, to be a hot, squirmy one of trying to appear at ease upon an elevated platform with the faces of proud mothers and fathers gazing rapturously upon the young hopefuls before them, and immediately in front the speaker of the evening.

One does not hear a great deal of a graduating address. It is always the same thing. There are the compliments upon the appearance of the graduates, the talk of the hard road which has just been traversed, and the exhortations to remember that we are living in an age of specialization and that to-day it is the college-bred man who will succeed in the world.

Perhaps one does remember that last just for a bit and the next fall enters college to receive the training for the life-work which is ahead of him. And in general, in direct ratio to the determination which the lad has to follow in some fixed line of endeavor are measured the results which he will achieve. It is not to students of the professional or vocational colleges that remarks such as these need to be addressed, but to those who have come to the University, and have enrolled in the literary college, simply to "get an education."

It is all so easy to come to college with a fixed determination to get all that there is out of it—sometimes that set purpose keeps the newcomer in hand all through his freshman year. And then, as a general rule, it becomes vague and indeterminate. His interest centres upon endeavors outside of the immediate jurisdiction of his studies, he vacillates, and he is lost; oh, not lost in the ordinary sense of the word, but lost in that he has given up the opportunity which his graduation speaker pointed out to him—of becoming a specialized, college-bred man.

One hears so often from sophomores, juniors and even seniors—"Oh, I'm sick of classes. I'm getting nothing out of them." And in truth, they are not—simply because they are putting nothing into them. But there is a secret—the secret, if you will, of an enjoyment of every moment of college life, and that is the awakening of a specialized interest in some particular subject. There are some of us who are born with that interest. Perhaps it is the books which appeal to us, perhaps it is political economy—perhaps it is some entirely different subject—it makes no difference, but we feel a keen interest in what we are learning—we develop what is perhaps best described as a healthy intellectual curiosity and our research carries us far beyond the scope of the ordinary classroom assignments to find out things for ourselves.

It is those students who have awakened in themselves or have found latent within them this same interest that derive a real benefit from their college courses. When they leave school, it is not with the feeling that their four years have been "wasted." They have gained something—with no little pride they feel themselves rather authorities on the subjects which have caught their attention, and their pleasure is a real one, born of the joy of specialization.—Michigan Daily.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for the sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communication from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office—that they write upon ONE SIDE of the paper ONLY.

No communication will be admitted in this column without the name of the writer being attached, not necessarily for PUBLICATION.

To the Editor,

McGill Daily.

The Standard of Sunday brought the news that the University of Toronto refused the admission of the University of Montreal in the intercollegiate-union. This news has deeply disappointed the students of this university. All the preparations had been made to enter the lists. The University of Montreal want to join the sister universities and then sons given are insufficient seeing that it sons given are insufficient, seeing that is the University of Toronto, which had made the first step in the proposition. Other reasons given was that their schedule was full enough, and it was impossible to change anything.

It is deeply regrettable, that the admission of the University of Montreal in the intercollegiate-union has been refused. At least it is my duty to address my best thanks to the universities of McGill and Queen for their support.

This noble and generous action will be remembered everywhere.

A Student of U. of M.

P.S.—It is hoped that 'Varsity will reconsider the decision.

The Editor,

McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—May I be permitted to express, through the medium of your columns, my personal appreciation of the growing spirit of "integrity" which is apparent in all the sectional clubs at McGill.

I have spoken to many members of the various clubs, especially in connection with the proposed "combined" dance and everywhere I have found a great undercurrent of enthusiasm towards this departure from ordinary social gatherings. This, I think, everyone recognizes, if at all successful, will be the beginning of a movement towards closer relationship and greater intercourse between the clubs. These are times of greater vision, and surely such an example on the part of the various executives is a thing to be greatly applauded.

Finally, I wish to conclude by saying that the Newfoundland Club, of which I am a member, is unanimous in its support of any such attempt to bring the various clubs into closer touch with each other.

Yours sincerely,

RALPH H. LeMESSURIER.

Editor, McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—There appeared in to-day's issue a paragraph giving notice that a joint meeting of sectional clubs is to be held shortly for the discussion of a joint dance some time in February next.

As a stranger in this country and a member of the Cosmopolitan Club, it is indeed gratifying to note that such a proposal has been put forward.

It is a move that will prevent the arising of a problem in the future, that of cliques.

While Sectional clubs fill a gap that could not otherwise be conveniently filled, yet there is no better way to avoid the possibility of cliques assuming rigidity than by getting them to meet socially.

I wish therefore, Mr. Editor, to express my appreciation to the executives that gave birth to the idea.

In closing, I might add that those members of the club that I have spoken to on the subject are very enthusiastic on the prospect of fruition.

Thanking you for your space,

Yours faithfully,

F. RANDOLPH MacPHERSON.

The Editor,

McGill Daily:

Dear Sir,—It is with mingled feelings of amusement and contempt that I observed in this morning's "Daily" a letter signed R. Charding. This sombre gentleman's poor taste is only surpassed by his poor grammar. His opening remark about "emaciated faces walking about our streets," would certainly win a prize if submitted to "Punch."

If everyone in this world who had any money, refused to enjoy himself because of the poor, then the only happy people would be those who had nothing.

Mr. Charding's remarks are particularly out of place when applied to Theological students. These students are giving up all chances of financial success in order to strive towards the betterment of humanity! And yet Mr. Charding resents their having a good time while at McGill.

It would appear that the author of yesterday's touching epistle aspires to the position of president of the Blue-Flag League. His one ambition in life is to cause everybody to be as unhappy as possible, to make us all think of the woes of mankind, and to brand the unfortunate, who frequents R.V.C. Thés, and Informal Dances, as a fiend in human form. I wonder if Mr. Charding ever indulges in the

SEARCH FOR IDEAL GIRL AT TULANE

Contest Conducted by Their Newspaper, the Hulla-baloo.

Search for the ideal girl continues and this week she is slightly taller, a bit heavier and is not so expensive as the first type submitted.

Sigma Nu is the second 'fraternity' to tear away the veil of modesty, and holds up its hands for a fair catch. The chapter runs through a broken field of possible criticism for a touchdown with this description of the perfect woman:

"She is five feet, six inches in height, weighs about 120 pounds, of medium build, with chestnut or auburn hair (which should be marcelled and worn in a medium coiffure,) large blue eyes, offset with long eyebrows, slender hands, neck and arms, small mouth, and nose slightly retousse."

The type is described definitely to the slightest detail, and economy is the keynote of her dress. It is maintained by the Sigs that "the ideal woman needs no furbelows or expensive accessories to emphasize her loveliness, and extravagant trimmings or overdress would only detract from her charm. The dominant note in all of costume should be that of studied feminine simplicity," they declare.

By all means her skirt should not hang higher than ten inches above the ground. The Sigs are emphatic in this specification and go on with her dress, which for ordinary purposes requires only three economical frocks.

"Her street dress," they say, "is designed for moderate weather wear, and should be of Havana brown or burnt orange velvet or kasha cloth, embroidered with a flat silk braid. The dress is modelled with four panels over the skirt, three-quarter Jenny sleeves and simple rounded neck; or in lieu of the panels, six inch sashes that drop well below the hem and which are held to a low girdle with cartridge pleats."

"Black satin slippers are appropriate for the ideal girl," the suggestion continues, "and should be worn with sheer, black hosiery."

For house wear a simple plaid, worsted skirt with a tailored blouse of white Japanese silk, is suggested.

"There should be a slight bit of color and life to her evening gown," it is explained, "and hydrangea blue chiffon is suggested to appropriately match her natural complexion and personality."

Again, simplicity is the dominant note, and no jewels should be worn. A corsage of pink rosebuds would be in good taste, however.

The cut of her gown should be along the lines of the ideal's street frock-skirt ten inches above the ground, simple rounded neck. Modest décolletage is suggested, with the entire absence of sleeves, and the girdle should be low hung. "A very pretty cape for evening wear," the chapter declares, "is made of black silk, quilted and cut full, gathered loosely about the neck and provided with necessary button loops of black corded silk and jet buttons."

Economy is still further emphasized in the selection of millinery, and two hats are suggested to add variety to the street costume. The hats should not cost more than eighteen dollars each, however, and should be simple brown or dark velvet affairs with little or no trimming. Full crowns with narrow brims is suggested for the hat shapes.

HOW TO ANSWER A WANT AD.

Don't get there too early. A well-bred college man does not wish to mingle with the hoi polloi and over-cage-job seeker.

When you finally arrive, hand the office boy your card (engraved), and demand in a voice that should command respect, that it is your wish to see the head of the concern on very personal business.

Upon entering the inner circle, glance around with an air of supreme disdain, at the same time noting carefully the stenographer's get-up. Pass the time of day with the boss and then calmly offer him a Pall Mall, lighting up at the same time yourself.

Condescendingly suggest several improvements in the arrangement of the office.

Then, and only then, nonchalantly flash your sheepskin on him and in a firm tone of voice ask for a situation.

Upon leaving the office, be extremely careful to land on that portion of the anatomy betwixt the brains and the second joint of your spinal column. This method does not wear out the clothes at so crucial a point as the usual way employed by most movie comedians.—Columbia Spectator.

luxury of the street-car, or does he save the 6-14 cents to buy a loaf of bread for the poor.

In conclusion may I quote Sydney Smith, who said, "Benevolence is a natural instinct of the human mind—when A sees B in grievous distress his conscience always urges him to treat C to help him."

Yours sincerely,

MANDOLIN CLUB'S TOUR ARRANGED

Mr. Peate, as Advance Agent, Says Prospects Good.

Plans for the McGill Mandolin Club's concert tour are nearing completion. Mr. Peate, who went ahead as advance agent to the several proposed towns for the purpose of making definite arrangements has brought back a most satisfactory report. Two or three towns have either made definite cash guarantees, or else come to some other very satisfactory agreement. On the whole prospects could hardly look better than they do. It now remains for the Club to make sure that our prospective audiences shall be in no way disappointed in their expectations. Each member must let nothing stand in the way of his attendance at practices. A lot of practice still is necessary to get the required expression in the slower pieces and the snap to the marches. Although selections rendered by the club as a whole will by no means make up the complete programme, yet they will be the most important and basic part of it, and unless they are of a high order the programme will fall short. Only three or four practices more are possible, and tonight's is one of them. So every member is urged to be at Peate's Studio at 7.15 sharp for a good snappy workout.

PROFESSOR TAIT TO SPEAK TO ONTARIANS

Conditions in Ireland will be the subject of a short talk that Professor Tait will give to the members of the Ontario Club at their smoker on Monday, Dec. 19th.

This is to be one of the numbers on the elaborate programme of entertainment which is being arranged for that evening.

Little is really known of this distressed country and a short informal talk from one who thoroughly understands his subject should be of great benefit at this time.

The original records of Juan de Anza, the first Spaniard to enter California from the Southeast, have been discovered in libraries of Mexico, where they had been lost. These records are in the form of diaries and record in minute detail an expedition in 1775 from Spain's northernmost outpost to the San Joaquin Valley and San Francisco Bay, faithfully depicting the life of that time in what is now California.

PEPYS AT Mc GILL

Monday, Dec. 12th. Up and peeping about the campus at divers intervals during this day in great hopes of beholding the women students again skating upon the ice, but naught seen. So home to my lodgings in a sort of attempt to do a little of my academic studies, for all men cease not to impress upon me the imminence of the proofs and examinations to which the dons will put us about the new year, and more especially the sophomores whose chiefest delight it now is to tell us poor freshman of the great numbers who are dismissed without appeal from these colleges year by year. All beginning to be somewhat of a tremor. I had at first thought that my present lodgings were quite without blemish, but of late I have come to doubt somewhat of the honesty and good faith of my fellowes who dwell there. One there is in particular, a clerk in a counting-house, whom I previously suspect of making away with my small stock of ale when I am busied at the colleges. Twice have I found him loitering by my door, and entered to find a flagon gone; also he wiped his hand across his lips with a most unseemly air betokening great satisfaction. I have laid plaint with my new landlady, one Madame Champignon, a woman of French speech, but most charming in all things. This business of the stolen ale I find does weigh upon my mind more almost than that of the examinations, and small wonder at that, for it is a most wretched thing to do. To bed well content with the greater warmth of the weather, though my feet became a little damp in the process of it.

He: "I'd like to know why you girls get engaged to several men at once?"

She: "When you have only one match, doesn't it go out?"

He: "May I have this dance?"

She: "Yes, if you can find somebody to dance with." —Log.

THE PHANTO SKIER.

(Part III.)

Donald regarded the finding of that miniature of the girl-in-grey as a curious coincidence. Nick said little but intimated that the incident was a trick of the "Evil One" to lead us into making the acquaintance of the "Phantom People," a race whose friendship he considered undesirable. My own feelings were different. The piquant little face in the picture seemed to appeal to me for sympathy and the idea that she was looking for something made me want to help her. If the girl had been living I would have liked her for a friend.

On one point, however, we were all agreed. The girl in the miniature and our phantom skier were the same individual. By this time Don and I had also ceased to try to explain the afternoon's experience in the usual way: i. e., that it had been an optical illusion, that she was a real girl. We were now intensely curious and thoroughly intrigued. We were as anxious for "more" as children who have tasted forbidden sweets for the first time. Sweet however are generally procurable; information about wandering ghosts is harder to find. I discovered the next day. I gave the Art gallery a holiday and began the hunt early. (Don had two tests add the usual lectures, so we had agreed to meet in the evening.) I tackled my father first, with the following results:—

1. He had not known of the existence of the miniature.

2. The book had been given him years ago by an old friend and though he valued the gift he had never really read its contents.

3. Had his friend any children? No.

4. Who was he? Sir Oliver Blair of Sterling Scotland, man of letters, student and eminent psychologist.

5. Had he any idea who the girl was? No.

Father essayed this much—good naturedly enough, although he was mildly amused at my curiosity but I soon saw that my questions would not get me very far and that if I displayed too much enthusiasm I should have to explain the cause.

I spent the first part of the morning at the Fraser Institute making inquiries and looking up old history books. Later I went to the Chateau de Ramsay and spent ages going through old pictures and records. By lunch time I had gained nothing more than a large appetite.

In the afternoon I sat down to read the "Legends of Old Montreal." "Tome-ah," the cat came too. Precisely what it is that inspires her one-sided attachment has never been very apparent. I hate cats. I don't wonder father never read that book. Its title sounds interesting but its appearance is against it. It has very fine old-fashioned print, extremely difficult to read and the names of the legends are not very prepossessing. Anyway they did not seem to have much to do with girls-in-grey. They dealt chiefly with crimes of early settlers and the disasters which followed their actions.

By five o'clock I was heartily tired of ghosts and gore, and was longing for fresh air and human companionship. It was most considerate of Don to turn up just then and refreshing to see his cheery countenance.

He has no pretensions to good looks but his wholesome ugliness is really quite attractive when he smiles. "Well, friend of mine, how are you?" was his greeting. "What is the news?" "Don't feed up with ghosts—this book is too gruesome for words and libraries are stupid and the Chateau Ramsay is full of cobwebs and this blessed cat annoys me—let's do something nice."

We proceeded to meet the needs of the inner man at that admirable institution known as "Page and Shaw's." Of course we discussed the girl-in-grey and lib and my interest was renewed by the time we reached home again.

At the door we met Nick. He seemed quite excited.

"What it it, Nick? Some news for us?"

"It is the story of de lecutt girl. I once guide for Sair Olivair—de man who give your father de book. He tell me story about Indian boy and lecutt girl—I nevair tink till now—it ces all so plain—Itell you!"

He proceeded to tell us, at some length, the story which put more briefly is as follows:—

About 200 years ago there was a man living in Montreal who occasionally crossed the river to hunt on the south shore. One day while so doing he came across an Indian lying on the ground badly wounded with a small boy bending over him. The red man explained that he was "big chief" who had been treacherously stabbed by his own people and left to die. He had not to live and realized the fact. The hunter's kindness in binding his wound made him make the following request—that he should take the boy, his son, and care for him

CONGOS WIN BASKETBALL LAST NIGHT

Molson Hall Was Scene of Lively Game.

SCORE OF 38—8.

Diocesans Rally in the Last Half.

The Congregational basketball team defeated the Diocesans last night in Molson Hall by the score of 38—8. The game was fairly fast, and at times provided some exciting thrills. The Congregationalists showed great superiority in team work and shooting ability, and at times played rings around their opponents by their speedy combination. The score at the end of the first half was 13—5 for the Congos, this period being the closer, as the Diocesans played hard, although it must be said that the Congos had rather hard luck shooting in the latter part of this period.

The Congos rushed hard at the start, and Moore and Bronson quickly piled up a six point lead; then, although they worked hard for the remainder of the period, their shooting luck was bad, and baskets became fewer and further between. In the second period Butler and Davey went on the Congo forward line, and with Moore pulled off some nice combination that led to the further undoing of the Diocesans. The Diocesans, however, worked hard in this period, and never for a moment ceased pressing the Congo basket. Their great fault seemed to be lack of accuracy in finding the basket. The game ended, Congos, 38; Diocesans, 8.

For the Congos Moore, Bronson and Butler did most of the scoring. Norman, for the Diocesans, netted penalty baskets with deadly accuracy, and in this department of the game the Diocesans showed some superiority to the Congos.

The teams lined up as follows.

McGILL ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION MEET

Further Meeting to be Held at Early Date.

At the meeting of the Athletic Association yesterday afternoon only minor matters were discussed; the main question before the Association being left over till the next meeting which takes place in the near future.

The following men have been granted permission to take part in sports as representatives of the Motor Machine Gun Brigade: A. S. Rutherford, C. G. Ross and R. McLeod.

It was decided to have a special file for letters or business matters pertaining to the Association placed in the office of the Student's Council. Any student who is writing the association will leave his correspondence in this box.

The McGill Senior Polo team have withdrawn their protest of the McGill-M. A. A. game. The protest was entered under the sincere conviction, which is still held, that the goal had not been scored and also that the referee had not seen the goal scored. The protest was immediately withdrawn when, in a later interview, the referee declared that he had seen the goal scored. The team, in no way, had wished to dispute the referee's word, and the protest was entered when the team were under the impression that the referee had not seen the goal.

What could be sadder than losing one's best friend.

until he was old enough to avenge his father's death but above all, to protect him from sharing the same fate at the hands of the old chief's tribal followers.

The white man buried "big chief" and took "little chief" home with him. His little daughter and the boy grew up together. In the winter their favorite amusement was to climb Mount Royal, tie long flat pieces of wood to their feet and slide down the hills on them. One day they had been sliding in this manner when they came to a big hill. The girl took the slope at a run. Half way down she tripped on a hidden rock, stumbled, fell and was badly stunned. Some hours later a search party found her but of the boy there was no trace. On the ground at the top of the hill was the insignia of his rank as son of a "big chief"—it was a long grey feather. (To be continued.)

C.O.T.C. MADE TRIP OUT TO SHAWBRIDGE.

On Saturday morning the troops were restrained from marching in to Shawbridge to church, and plans were made for fighting a rear-guard action across a certain section of country.

The rear-guard was put under the command of Captain Howard, whose force consisting of Lieut. Weldon was to oppose the advance of the C. O. T. C. by means of blank ammunition and two imaginary Lewis guns. Captain Leach acted as umpire and peace-maker.

A start of half an hour was given to the retreating force by the C. O. T. C. under Lieut. Winslow, who began a hot pursuit when the time came. Scouts were thrown out in front to locate the enemy's successive positions, from which he was regularly driven by the great efforts of the advancing force.

Finally the rear-guard, overcome by fatigue, took up a strong position where they fought to the last against the superior numbers of the C. O. T. C. A smoke and a general discussion followed.

The afternoon "show" was perhaps the most interesting and difficult of the two days' work. A farm house and buildings, located on a plateau, were held by the O.C., Captain Leach, Mr. Owen Dawson, and Mr. Mandago, armed with rifles and "blank" in place of Lewis guns. The attacking troops composed of the C. O. T. C., re-enforced by over a hundred boys, was under Lieut. Weldon.

The plan called for a feint on the left and the main attack on the right. The scheme worked well, except for half of the force on the left, who apparently got lost in making a circuit en route. Things were straightened out, however, by numerous runners from H. Q., and the various platoons finally got into position.

The platoon making the main surprise attack under Lieut. Winslow was able to approach to within 100 feet of the farm buildings before being discovered. A slight depression in the ground and the excellent covering fire of the supporting troops on the flank being chiefly responsible. Eventually the assault was delivered at a "zero hour" by a frontal attack and from the right flank simultaneously. The buildings and several important prisoners were taken.

Before supper the attack was fought over again on the black-board, and much instructive criticism was given. Individual officers and platoon leaders gave their versions of what had happened on their own fronts, which led to several interesting points being brought out. Before entraining for Montreal the Contingent attended evening service in the School assembly room. Col. Thompson thanked the staff of the school for the excellent treatment which had been accorded to the O.T.C., and also addressed a few words to the boys. He was vociferously backed up by the McGill yell. The other officers followed with a few words each, and lastly Lieut. Weldon thanked everyone for the good time which all had enjoyed.

Manager must see that these forms are correctly filled in and sign same. Under no conditions will credit be given for attendance in the Department of Physical Education to men whose names do not appear on these forms.

AT THE THEATRES
PRINCESS.

Varied and brimming to an overflow of the best is this week's bill at the Princess. From the headliner to the smallest act the performance is good and pleases the downright-hard-to-please.

It is one of the biggest feature bills of the season, of which the general effect is, to say the least, satisfying.

"Temptation," headlining the programme, is a tableau of music, drama and morality—unique. Mr. Kaliz, the "Man," has given vaudeville one of its biggest and best productions in "Temptation,"—entirely out of the ordinary, beautiful and artistic in setting and costume, captivating in its catchy lyrics and lilting music.

Mr. Kaliz is well known to us in his field, and taking, as he does, the leading role in the piece and combining with his acting his prowess as a producer he contrives in no small degree to make "Temptation" a thing far exceeding others of its kind to-day.

"Jazz in the Gym," shows Harry and Harriet simply put the punch in their little act. Harry is none other than Harry Seeback, the world's champion bag puncher. Harriet can tickle the air bags, too. She has looks behind the punch and a voice behind the looks.

John Tyrell and Tom Jay Mack, in "Timely Twists," are two dancing "tornadoes." The "Twists" is a most graceful execution of remarkable steps. Their little dance to the "Home Again Blues" makes you fairly stand.

"Twins Ever Thus," is a two act play—a mirror of married life it is—married folk will tell us. Tom Toier, with the assistance of Aasha Ayloffe, Lou Bartels and Margery Sidman make the fun in it that we are looking for.

Miss Ann Gray, whose programmes have attracted large critical audiences in the United States and elsewhere, sings and plays her harp. Lovers of music will enjoy her playing and the colour of her songs. Rarely does one see such a performance as her's in a bill of vaudeville.

"Putting it over" is just the title for the melange of chatter-patter, dance and song of Chester Spencer and Lola Williams. Mr. Spencer's method of delivery is unique, and calls forth mirth of the heartiest.

Billy Glason is here again with his store of nut-songs, topical sayings and comic satire, all his own. He still has his charming way, which has characterized his bills on former occasions.

Meehan's Canines are wonderful. The great trainer has done something which a host of his conferees have failed to do—he has trained his dogs to be happy at their work and to act as though they loved it as well as they do their master. The little feats of the large jumping hounds—these produce a surprising enthusiasm in us.

CAPITOL.

Taken as a whole the entertainment provided by the Capitol this week quite reaches the usual excellent standard set by that theatre.

"The Call of the North" provides an excellent vehicle for Jack Holt, the debonair d'Artagnan, who "rolls his own" with such delightful precision. His acting is good, but not brilliant. Helen Ferguson, who plays the part of the heroine, is true to type, but one sometimes wonders how she managed to learn so little of the world in which she lived.

The story deals with the days when the servants of the Hudson Bay Company were not troubled by being over scrupulous. The hero lives in the domains of the Company, trapping contrary to their rights, and hoping that he will some day meet the factor who caused his father's death. He is finally brought before the villainous factor for poaching, but by falling in love with that gentleman's daughter, who is virtue personified, he avoids the disagreeable task of avenging his father. The factor regrets his past misdeeds, and the couple paddle off to civilization and happiness.

The scene is laid in a most picturesque district and the life of the trapper is excellently portrayed. The other items on the programme are an amusing comedy, a film of new events, and extracts from "Pagliacci." The latter is especially well done, and the trio of singers, together with the Capitol ballet, deserve great credit for their artistic rendering of the popular opera.

ORPHEUM.

Though working with a plot that has been used again and again the Orpheum Players give an interesting and well staged offering of the Irish comedy Macushla.

Macushla is the name of a horse, a steppeler, who wins a race and brings the usual wealth to her owner. Of course the villain tries to poison the mare and bribes the jockey but the hero rides his horse to victory as is the case in all good racing plays.

A plot like this one requires a skillful handling and the little company of players are equal to the task. The acting is uniformly good and the scenes would do credit to many larger companies. Wm. Naughton's songs were well received and the performance of

Adventurous Quest in the North-West

(From a Prospector.)

Chance, the mistress of the wanderer, took me last winter from Fort Yukon, Alaska, to Fort Norman, N. W. T., Canada, in search of fortune in the shape of oil. In September, 1920, a big "gusher" of light oil of exceedingly high quality was found on the bank of the Mackenzie River, 58 miles below Fort Norman. That town stands on the high bank of the River where the Mackenzie is joined by Great Bear River, which flows from Great Bear Lake, 90 miles away. Parallel to the Mackenzie stretch mountain ranges on each side, those near of no great height, but the main range of the Rockies in full view, a hundred miles away. Bear Mountain, three miles across Bear River and sloping right into the Mackenzie, is a fine rock from which a magnificent view can be obtained. With this place as our goal, therefore, three of us started on January 6, of this year on an 1,100 mile walk, with a sled and team of dogs apiece.

Up the Porcupine River we travelled for a month, going north-east. On about February 1 we left the friendly smooth ice of the Porcupine and started across country. It had been bitterly cold for the past week, well below — 60 deg. all the time. Tracks of moose and caribou were everywhere, the country was swarming with game, but in such cold weather it is hopeless to hunt them, as sound travels easier on the coldest days and the sharp-eared moose would keep his distance from our betraying footfall.

For four days we struggled across the foothills of the mountains and reached a creek, the head of which lay up against the main divide. The snow was deep; the inclines were steep, our feet sore, our knees aching, our dogs tired, and we were all glad to meet an Indian, an old friend, who told us where to find a cache of moose meat which he had left. The cache was in the last timber, where our final camping place would be before crossing the divide. We lay up a day there and gave our dogs a big feed. Next day we crossed the divide. We had a 30-mile run between timber and timber which we had to make in the seven hours' daylight. The thermometer stood at 50 deg. below zero, but the wind was not strong and luckily in our backs.

In two days we were at Port Macpherson, on Peel River, a trading post and governed by Mr. John Firth, of the Hudson's Bay Company. Mr. Firth has been at Peel River for 50 years, having gone there straight from his birthplace in the Orkneys. He holds a gold medal for long and faithful service, and retired this year from the business, but continues to live at Macpherson.

We found great difficulty in getting what we wanted in the way of dog feed, but we got three nights' supply for a starter on a month's journey. We also were told of a lake, and how to get to it, where some Indians had over a thousand green (fresh) whitefish. In three days we reached the place, a great lake, unmarked on any map, to the east of the Mackenzie. There we found a large family of Indians, and 50 fish, which were their sole diet. There was a Roman Catholic priest at Arctic Bay, River, with 10,000 dried fish in cache, but the truly Christian man failed to see any benefit possibly coming to his bewhiskered self by helping unfortunate travellers. He flatly refused to let us have a single fish.

Nevertheless, the Indian at the big lake, who could speak no word of English, gave us every fish he could spare, which left him very little indeed.

After that life was a nightmare. All day long struggling over the rough ice, which is like great boulders of rock, of all dimensions, from 2 ft. to 20 ft. thick, piled anyhow and covered by a blanket of soft snow.

Camping in the Snow.

All day we heaved and tugged and pushed and fell and cursed, and at night sometimes we took three hours to make camp, frequently having to leave our sleds on the ice and haul our stuff up the steep, high bank, to the miserable little hole in the snow in which we slept. For a good camp one must have plenty of young green trees from which to cut boughs, and plenty of dry wood for fire. The this popular versatile actor was on the same high plane that has marked all his performances in this city.

The Orpheum Players during the time they have been in Montreal have given over a hundred plays many of which were presented for the first time and which never would have been seen here were it not for this company. This is their last week as burlesque will be seen at the Orpheum hereafter. However it is hoped that Harold Hevia will bring his players back again in the near future and give us more productions like those he has given us in the past.

CLUB SECRETARIES.

The Secretaries of all Clubs and Societies of McGill University are urgently requested to hand in at the Office of the Secretary, Students' Council, a list containing the names, addresses and phone numbers of all members of their respective executives.

Mackenzie River is extremely short of dry (dead) wood, and sometimes we would walk a mile and come back with only one stick.

After three days our dog feed gave out, and next night we fed them on our spare fur socks and the caribou skins on which we slept. They were not very nourishing, but something to go inside the poor brutes and stop the awful craving of hunger. We kept going on, wondering if we ever should "make it," or if we should have to kill our dogs, lighten our loads, and haul the sleds ourselves. We found a little cabin on a high bare bank, nicely built, obviously the work of a white man. We broke the lock, and, joy of salvation, we found two bales of dried fish and a sack of flour. That night we rejoiced exceedingly. We had enough food and dog feed to take us through to Fort Good Hope, on the Rabbit-Skin River.

The journey from Good Hope to Norman was more pleasant. We were feeding our dogs on on tallow as we could get no fish, but they held up, and we had fairly good camping places. The few days' wind had hardened the snow in some parts, and made travelling better. We pulled into Norman on March 15 at nearly midnight, and were made very welcome by the trader for the Northern Trading Company, a rival concern of the Hudson Bay Company, and one supplying excellent material to the buyer.

In the Bush.

We spent the next three months out in the bush, cutting out our claims, killing muskrats, and fish for our dogs, and making a map of the country, hitherto absolutely unknown. When spring came unexpectedly early, with its millions of ducks and geese flying northward to nest, it caught us out in the bush, away from the river, without food or the prospects of getting any, and 60 odd miles from Norman. We were continually wet, from our soles to our waist, with the melting snow. We crossed the river at a place about six miles wide on the rotten ice. Continually falling through and clambering out again, it was not a pleasant crossing.

It was then four days' dreary walk up the bank. Sometimes ploughing through deep melting snow, sometimes wallowing in mud, sometimes the bank would be too steep, and we would take to the bush till the dense undergrowth of matted spruce and willow drove us out again. Sometimes we would take five hours to cover a mile. We finally got back to Norman, over-ate ourselves for two days, and then set to work to build a boat in which to go down river and out the same way as we went in. On June 1 we said goodbye to Norman, and by July 10 we were on the Vancouver steamer from Skaguay, Alaska, bound for Prince Rupert and Edmonton, where we were to record our oil claims.

MR. MacNAB C.P.R., SPOKE TO SOCIETY.

whole railroad must function as one institution. He spoke of the many hardships which some employees must suffer in order that a passenger may travel from coast to coast comfortably. In closing he thanked the audience for listening so attentively to his address.

The appreciation of those present for the splendid talk given by Mr. MacNab was shown by the hearty applause which followed the end of his address. A vote of thanks was extended to him by Hughes on behalf of the Commercial Society. This motion was seconded by Laidlaw.

Excellent refreshments were then passed around. The Commerce '23 Orchestra, composed of Stephens, violin, Carter, banjo-mandolin, Gault, piano and Burland, saxophone, livened up the proceedings with syncopation.

NO PRE-WAR PRICES FOR TWENTY YEARS.

"It may be 20 years before we get back to pre-war prices," said Prof. Frank T. Carleton of the department of economics at DePaul University, who is visiting here during Homecoming. "The employment situation will not be improved within the next six months, but the country has at least reached the lowest level in business depression."

"Stock bought raw and held during the period of fluctuation while their values are down, will realize large amounts of money for investors," he advised.

Professor Carleton is the guest of Prof. F. A. Russell of the department of business organization and operation, who took undergraduate work from him at Albion College, in Michigan. He was an instructor in economics at the University during the summer school of 1914. He wrote the text book "History and Problems of Organized Labor," which is being used this semester by classes in labor problems.
